BRAVO! FROM PAGE TO STAGE

Many contemporary plays are written to mimic authentic speech. Through audience participation, teachers will learn to guide their students through the process of analyzing and memorizing scenes from certain contemporary American plays. They will learn to guide them as they rehearse and ultimately perform these scenes for a chosen audience.

The students will have the opportunity to learn pronunciation techniques from videos of professional native speaker actors performing the scene.

The program provides the opportunity for reading, listening, speaking and writing assignments for the whole semester.

Join Ellen Tobie, for a two-hour workshop as she shows us how to increase our students' English language skills through rehearsal and performance of scenes from a contemporary American play.

Ellen Tobie Gilberti, adjunct Professor in the English Language Program at the University of Pennsylvania, has also taught ESL and EFL at Hunter College in Manhattan and the Nationalities Services Center in Philadelphia. She comes to the world of TESOL from 30 years in the theatre as an actress where she has performed on Broadway, off Broadway, in theatres across America, in film and on television.
